MORE ABOUT RED TEMPLES

Hailing from the southeast of Perth, Red Temples came together in 2021 with a love of local original music that sparked their desire to play from the heart. The five members comprised of good friends Jim Churchill on vocals and guitar (previously toured and performed at the Big Day Out with his band The Egg), Chris Ellis on guitar (formerly in bands Damien's Trick, Afraid Of Flying and Honeywheeler), Paul Dean on bass, Seath Churton on drums (formerly in New Zealand bands Vent and Static Mine), and Philly Blunt on keys (award winning DJ and producer) have intertwined their creative spirit into a collective sound reminiscent of early 90's indie rock, infused with light and dark, character and charm.

Ether is the first single taken from their forthcoming sophomore EP, coming in 2027.

"At the heart of it" Ether is about nostalgia and reflection. Seeing the changes that have occurred to oneself, but inside, still feeling like the same person you did all those years ago. It's about wanting to reconnect with someone you once were and trying to recapture the feeling of your life before it got complicated.

The production intentionally mimics the thematic story, beginning with a stripped back, empty and raw intro, before building into a full, well rounded 'life' of the song. Escalating through anthemic choruses into an uplifting climax. With the outro seemingly capturing the entire melancholic nostalgic essence of the song, by softly asking "is it coming back to me now?"

Red Temples' single Ether is out November 6, 2026 and they are celebrating with a release party on November 7 at The Bird, Northbridge.
Supported by: Moth Street Artists, A Wolf Like Me and DJs Rovy Rush and Philly Blunt.

MORE ABOUT RED TEMPLES

Red Temples are that friend you haven't caught up with in ages. Blending influences from the music of their youth, the world in which they live and work, and the changes of life around them, to create a mature and modern take on Australian roots and indie rock. A sound immediately familiar, yet all their own, their songs are built from the stories and melodies of the everyday.

The members have forged a strong kinship along the way and their friendship and personality inspires the sound of the band, held close around lyrics embedded in nostalgia, messy wisdom and yearning. Bringing acclaimed live shows to the Perth music scene over the past three years, their infectious energy, passion and playfulness has garnered fans across the musical landscape.
